Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 09 Sep 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Unsettled and showery, but remaining warm and muggy.

Today:
Spells of rain moving north across the UK this morning followed by a mixture of bright spells and heavy, thundery downpours. Cooler than Wednesday but still feeling warm and humid for many.

Tonight:
Showers and thunderstorms mostly dying out, though a few likely to be persisting in the west and north. Rather warm and muggy.

Friday:
A cloudy start with some patchy rain in the north and west. Skies brightening but scattered showers breaking out by afternoon, some heavy and thundery in the north and east.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Rain across the far north on Saturday but for most it will remain largely dry with sunny spells and just the odd light shower. Temperatures close to average.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.